Healing The Fragmented Selves Of Trauma Survivors: Overcoming Self-Alienation

15 Hour In-Person & Live-Online Course

Monday - Friday: 9:00a.m.-12:30p.m. EDT/30-Min Break Daily at 10:30a.m.

Childhood abuse necessitates self-alienation: we must disown that humiliating “bad child” and work harder to be the “good child” acceptable to our attachment figures. In the end, children survive trauma at the cost of disowning and dissociating from their most wounded selves. While longing to feel safe and welcome, they later find themselves in conflict: alternating between clinging to others and pushing them away, hating themselves or hating others, yearning to be seen while trying to be invisible. Years later, these clients present in therapy with symptoms of anxiety, depression, low self-esteem, diagnoses of bipolar and borderline personality disorder, and a distorted sense of identity.

This workshop offers a practical hands-on approach to traumatized clients with underlying issues of self-alienation and self-hatred by helping them see how the trauma has left them fragmented and at war within their own minds and bodies. Participants will learn how to help their clients observe the parts they have embraced and identified with as ‘me’ but also the trauma-related parts they have disowned and judged harshly. Using interventions drawn from a number of therapeutic approaches (including Sensorimotor Psychotherapy, Internal Family Systems, and ego state therapy), the focus is on helping clients observe and accept all aspects of self with interest and curiosity. As their young parts are identified and understood as ‘heroes’ in the individual’s story of survival, clients are able to feel more warmly toward them, often for the first time. Techniques will be demonstrated that increase the capacity to feel for and with each part, that foster the sense of caring for young wounded selves, and that pave the way for growing “earned secure attachment.” Even when our clients are unable to tolerate emotion, extend themselves compassion, or take in someone else’s caring, they can still learn to feel protective of their younger selves and to finally welcome home these ‘lost souls’ with warmth and compassion.

Course Agenda

Monday: Trauma and self-alienation

- The costs and benefits of disowning one’s traumatized child self as a survival strategy.
- Introduction to Structural Dissociation model as a trauma-related explanatory model for understanding chronic chaos, resistance, and self-destructive behavior.

Tuesday: Befriending our disowned selves

- Using mindfulness-based techniques drawn from Internal Family Systems and Sensorimotor Psychotherapy to build client interest and curiosity in their split-off emotions, vulnerability, and self-destructive behavior.

Janina Fisher, PhD | Healing The Fragmented Selves Of Trauma Survivors:
Overcoming Self-Alienation | July 17th - July 21st, 2023*Wednesday:*Increasing self-compassion by cultivating compassion for younger parts of the individual

- Learning to appreciate each part's contribution, to ask, "How did this part help me to survive? Without it, what would have happened?"

Thursday:Transforming traumatic memory

- By teaching clients how to connect emotionally to their wounded child selves and provide reparative or "missing" experiences.

Friday:Building internal self-attachment

- How to help clients "earn" secure attachment as the therapeutic outcome of creating internal acceptance, safety, and welcome for each wounded part of the self.

Course Objectives

Upon completion of this course participants will be able to:

1. Identify signs and symptoms of fragmentation and internal conflict
2. Describe how to help clients put non-judgmental language to their trauma-related symptoms and inner experience
3. Explain how to decrease client phobias of emotion and inner experience by increasing mindfulness-based dual awareness
4. Discuss how to facilitate mindful tracking of fragmented parts of the self
5. Utilize somatic interventions for regulating autonomic arousal and affect dysregulation to calm the body
6. Describe how to integrate interpersonal neurobiology and social engagement techniques into the treatment
7. Discuss how to increase self-compassion through growing empathy for wounded child parts
8. Discuss how to transform traumatic memory using somatic, visualization, and ego state techniques
9. Describe how to foster earned secure attachment'
